Woman Returns To Life In Mortuary

Melbourne, Aug. 19. "Am I dead?" asked Mrs Sheila Baulch last night when she woke up in the city morgue. Legally, she was. But morgue attendants ignored the death certificate and returned her to the Royal Melbourne Hospital for treatment of a head

Mrs Baukh, 45-year-old visitor from Balranald, New South Wates, was found lying cold and motionless in the street yesterday after she apparently had fallen and sustained a slight head cut.

She was taken to the hospital, where a young doctor examined her, pronounced life extinct, and signed a death cortificate. She was taken to the morgue and was placed on a steel trolley to be wheeled into the freezing chamber for the night to await a post mortem examination this morning. Then a policeman saw an eye and then her check flicker. A few minutes later she sat up and asked: "Am I dead?" Mrs Baulch was taken back to the hospital and treated for the head cut and released 90 minutes later. Since then she has disappeared and police have been unable to find her. Hospital authorities explained the incident - first of its kind in Melbourne - by saying it is possible for the heart and lungs to stop momentarily.—United Press.

EOKA TRUCE OFFERS CHANCE OF QUICK CYPRUS SETTLEMENT

London, Aug. 19. Britain intends to take full advantage of the truce offered by the EOKA underground organisation in an effort to forge a quick settlement of the Cyprus situation, informed sources said today. The extremists, who killed over 100 persons in their 16 months of underground activitles against the British announced last week that they were ready for a truce "to test British good faith." And informed sources said today Britain was moving fast to follow up the advantage thus gained.

Fear of EOKA vengrance hitherto has prevented Greek Cypriot leaders from meeting with Governor Sir John Harding and other British officials to discuss a settlement of the political deadlock on the island, Official sources said today the truce may pave the way for such meetings in the near future.

The four men were allowed to sit outside the dock on the application of Mr Wright who said that the facilities in the dock were restricted (it could only, hold three of them abreast) and one of his clients was not in the best of health.

Mr Rea was granted leave to amend the charges by a change of dates and by a further allegation that the bribe was also for Keay's "forbearing to show his disfavour."

On behalf of Keay, Mr Gittins made a preliminary application. He said that on June 8 Keay's account with the Chartered Bank was attached or frozen by a Bench warrant issued by a Magistrate on the ground that the credit standing to the balance was connected with the precent proceedings. Counsel submitted that the of the Criminal Section Ordinance under which the Chinese Visit China Kuala Lumpur, Aug. 20.

The number of Malayan Chinese visiting China in 1955 had increased compared to the previous year but more locally resident businessmen had brought in their wives and children from China to make Malaya their home, the Federation Government said in its annual report published today.

"Now that in many cases properties owned by overseus Chinese have been confiscated and redistributed by Chinese People's Government the incentive to return to China on the part of the husband has largely disappeared," the report said.

The increase in the number of travellers to China in 1955-3,769 compared to 2,170 in 1954 -was not particularly significant, the report said,

NATURAL

"The desire on the part of China-born Chinese to return for a visit to their parents or wives is always present."

The report said "A contributory incentive to visit China is provided by the fact that visitor to China is allowed to take some personal effects with him and nearly every traveller takes a new bleycle, a watch and a fountain pen.

Finesse Avoided For Safe Slam

By OSWALD JACOBY

LIOW would you play the South hand at a contract of six hearts? Plan the play, beginning with West's opening lead of the eight of spades.

You mustn't take the spade finesse at the first trick! Play the low spade from the dummy, allowing East to win the trick with the ten. When East returns a club, go right up with the ace of clubs.

You refuse both fineases, since you intend to rely on a reasonable diamond break. The odds are almost five to one in favour of the fair break in diamonds, but are only even on each o the finesses.

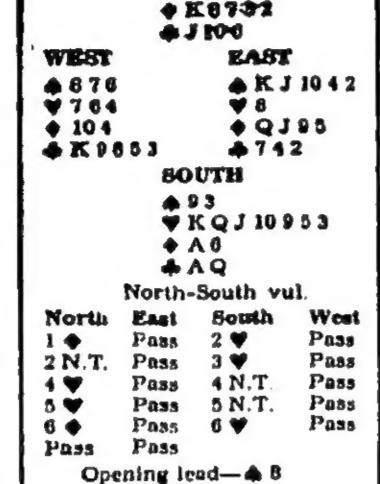

At the third trick, you take the king of hearts. You afford to draw one round of you take the ace and king of diamonds. When both opponents follow both times, you are

New Ideas From Italy's Young Designers

Italian fashion is noted for its young designers. First Capucci created a niche in couture. Now come Sarli, Giuliano and Likis.

Two of these, Fausto Barli and Giuliano, had shown collections during the previous spring/summer collections and met with considerable success, but the house of Likis was showing for the first time.

UNSPECTACULAR, BUT IN EXCELLENT TASTE

This firm was founded by two sisters-Liliana and Kitta They presented a though unspectacular, collection of clothes in wellchosen colours and textiles, all of which were in excellent taste.

"Studio No. 24" is the rather vague title which Fausto Sarli has given to his new line for the coming autumn. In actual fact, it is a simplified version of his Casanova line introduced last spring. The typical slanting cut is shown on suit jacket fronts, which are cut away to form an open triangle shape from neck to hem. Often the cut-away piece is filled in with

To interpret these soft flowing lines, Barli has chosen plain wool clothes in delicate colours such as lime yellow, moss and pistachio green, although touches of vivid colour are not absent For instance, one ensemble is in flame red duvetine while another is in deep bright blue. Both. incidentally, are trimmed with honey-coloured beaver fur,

The second Florence collection of Giuliano bore the unmistakable stamp of couture in perfectly-tailored suits and topcoats which exuded refined elegance and were full of novel detail.

Overdue honours went to yet another club on Saturday when Kowloon Cricket Club annexed the First Division title to virtually complete the 1956 Lawn Bowls League season.

By defeating Recreio in the last First Division League game of the season by four points to one, Kowloon Cricket Club, who had only once previously won the title and that as far back as 1931, brought their total points to 50, just one point ahead of Craigengower Cricket Club.

London, Aug. 19. Any Olympic sportsman or woman who intends to turn professional after the Games at Melbourne should know by the end of the month whether it will be as easy to do as it was for those like Sonia Henie. She made a fortune when she capitalised on her Olympic skating successes of 1932

The International Olympic Committee recently directed that competitors must pledge they intend to remain amateurs after the Games. Previously competitors only had to pledge that they were and always had been amateurs.

A request by the United States Olympic Committee to defer the new rule is to be discussed in the next few weeks. EUROPA CUP

Says W. CAPEL KIRBY

It would not surprise me if Manchester United eventually withdraw from the Europa Cup, providing, of course, they survive the early stages of this homeand-away competition between Europe's champion clubs.

Ten Years Of The Atom At Peace

Britain's Achievements In A Decade By TOM MARGERISON

who is Science Correspondent of the London "Sunday Times" and the Managing · Editor of "British Chemical Engineering"

Ten years ago the possibility of building great power stations driven by atomic energy seemed very remote. Yet next October, the first large-scale atomic power station in the world will go into operation at Calder Hall on the fringe of the beautiful Lake District in North West England.

A tenth of the electricity consumed in Britain will be generated by atomic power in 1966 and probably nearly a half by 1975.

Disused Air Force Station

The whole of the British atomic energy industry has been built up within only ten years, In April 1946 builders moved in to a disused Royal Air Force station near Harwell amid the rolling Berkshire hills and The advent of the gas turbine started work on converting it into laboratories and workshops. That was the start of Establishment, which under the direction of Sir John Cockeroff. programme possible.

In these factories uranium is processed to make Atomic power is now a it suitable for use as a fuel in reality both scientifically and atomic power stations or as an

In all, radio-isotopes.

Unique Problems

The building of the atomic factories was one of the largest engineering jobs undertaken in Britain since the end of the war. The problems encountered were quite unlike those found in any other industrial process because in much of the plant the materials being handled were highly radioactive,

Now that, with the building of Calder Hall, the first stage in exploiting nuclear power has been successfully achieved, Harwell and Risley are turning to more advanced types of nuclear furnace which may eventually lead to cheaper atom power. The largest of these projects is the "brocker" furnace which is being built at Doumreay in the north of Scotland. This type of nuclear furnace has the valuable property of converting inert uranium into atomic fuel to such an extent that it produces more fuel than it burns.

The Dounreay furnace, which was designed at Risley on the basis of experiments done at Harwell, will be contained in a large steel shell, which is now nearing completion, although the power station as a whole will not be ready for a few years yet.

Cheaper Than Uranium

Another important project, which is still being worked on at Hawrell is that of building nuclear furnaces to work on atomic fuel made from thorium instead of uranium. Thorium is more common and cheaver than uranium and should be an important source of power in the future.

Today there are British firms preparing to supply complete atom power stations or small water cooled nuclear furnaces for scientific and medical applications. Ten years ago such a statement would have read like an extract from a science fiction novel. Ten years hence, who knows what the position will be. Perhaps the experiments now being carried out at Harwell on methods of controlling the hydrogen bomb reaction will have borne fruit and we shall be on the verge of an even greater revolution in power production.

Protection-Like Implications Of Convention Trade Policy Plank
